

Mount Union Mayor Tom Holder, left, and police chief Doug Gummo displayed two new neighborhood watch signs at Monday evening's meeting of borough council. The signs will be erected in the borough, at each end of town. The signs are larger than existing signs. They were purchased with CitizensCorp funding through the Huntingdon County Emergency Management Office. Jane Cowan, a Mount Union resident active in the neighborhood watch, took a lead role in getting the signs. Neighborhood watch volunteers are looking for other residents to participate in walks. Those interested should meet in front of the borough building on Market Street at 6:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays.
